BLAINE'S LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 7.—The publication of Mr. Blaine's letter of acceptance has been the subject of universal comment, and there is a great variety of opinion in regard to it. The silence of the editorial columns of the press generally is considered a little singular, and the public men at the capital are about equally divided as to what its effects will be upon popular appreciation of the late administration. It is very generally conceded, however, that it will add nothing in the public mind to the estimation of the administration, and its redeeming feature is the exhibition of kindly feeling existing between the President and the premier. It is doubtful, in the opinion of most commentators, whether Mr. Blaine would have approved of its publication had he known it was contemplated. The more the origin of the disclosure is discussed, the more unanimous the conviction becomes that it may be traced to the Attorney General himself, and that it is a piece of strategy intended to make the position of the Secretary of State in the cabinet untenable should President Arthur request him to retain his portfolio. The matter has given rise to gossip about the formation of the cabinet of the late President that brings out some things not known before. It transpires that the acceptance of Attorney General MacVough was a done deal altogether unique, and not at all in the same vein as that of the Secretary of State, Mr. MacVough, it appears, wrote to the President-elect, saying that he could not accept a position in his cabinet unless he could give effect to the principles he represented in the Republican party. He continued that he did not see how he could do so, associated with certain elements (Blaine) that he understood the cabinet would contain. If, however, the President would not consider him bound in any sense to remain nor to accept for the four years of his term, he would take the following November and should be at liberty to retire if he so desired, having decided that he could not practically represent the principles of politics that he deemed vital. In other words he wanted to come if the President would take him at his own pleasure and not hold him to the position longer than he thought proper to fill it.

General Harrison C. Hobart, who has been a staunch Democrat all his life, has given public notice that he will hereafter work and vote with the Republicans. General Hobart is well known in this State, and this change in his political faith will have its influence in a right direction. He ran for Governor on the Democratic ticket in 1859 against Randall, and was beaten by 7,400 majority, and ran again in 1865 against General Fairbairn, and was defeated by 10,002 majority. He was a war Democrat, but after the contest with treason—the Democratic party as a whole favoring treason—he found many things to condemn in the party in which he had been reared, and suggested new departures, but his suggestions were never heeded. He finally became convinced that the Democratic ranks was no place for him and he abandoned the party and will heartily support General Rusk and the entire Republican ticket. The Democrats part with one of their strongest men in losing General Hobart.

"From the Governor's chair of one of the proudest States in the Union to the bar of a criminal court is the steep decline which has been traveled during the past ten years by a man who was arraigned in this city yesterday for petty swindling operations." This quotation is from a New York paper of the 5th. The name of the man who has made such a rapid decline, and who figured so conspicuously before the police courts during the past few months, is Franklin W. Moses, Jr. The family from which he sprang, was one of the most influential in South Carolina. After the war, Moses' father became Chief Justice of the State and an uncle a Circuit Judge, and young Moses got in the Legislature, was elected Speaker, and in 1873 was elected Governor and served two years. His election to that office was his ruin. He ran wild in extravagance and dissipation, and all the money he gained by dishonesty while in office was soon wasted when he left it. He went to New York and at the same time went from bad to worse and finally into prison. He became a swindler by profession and was frequently called before the bar of the courts for his misdeeds. The story of his life for the past eight years is a sad one, for he once had splendid opportunities and powerful political influence behind him, but still insisted in making a vagabond of himself.

A FEVER OF EXCITEMENT.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—It is now probable that Mr. Serrill will not be alone in the defense of Cuticura. Intimations have been received here, within a day or two, that at least two quite distinguished lawyers will volunteer their services. The matter will be settled in the course of the next week. George Serrill carried to Guiteau's cell a sensation. He left with him some papers, including some Chicago files, which were the first papers that Guiteau has seen since he assassinated the President. Some of these papers spoke very freely of Guiteau's crime, and of the necessity of hanging him as speedily as possible. He is reported to have been so excited by reading these papers that he has been thrown into a high fever, which still continues.

OHIO.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 7.—Today has been a most active one among the Democrats and Republicans, but the confidence stimulated by the lavish display of money yesterday has materially decreased, and the Democratic candidate has relapsed to second place, the sporting fraternity backing Governor Foster at even money on 10,000 majority over Bookwalter, and offering five to one on 5,000, with but few takers. During the day the Democratic candidate has been doing the rolling-mills and manufacturing establishments throughout the city. At some of these he was confronted with large placards giving the views expressed by himself one year ago on the tariff question. Mr. Bookwalter was asked at some place what his views were now, he having never discussed or spoken on the issues of the campaign since nomination. To these questions he replied that his time was limited, and that he could not afford to cut his throat at this time by giving his views.

PENSION FRAUDS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Colonel H. W. Dudley has been for some weeks investigating a ring in the pension office. The fact that there were fraudulent pensioners on the roll has long been known, and the claim agents under previous commissions have the brunt of the blame for these frauds. Colonel Dudley early became convinced that many of them were the work of those inside the office, and started quietly and vigorously to ferret out the unfaithful clerks. He is almost ready to make arrests. When the blow falls, his prosecutions will vie with those of the Postmaster General. It is not yet known how many are implicated, but the number under investigation now is about thirty. The amount of money involved will reach into the millions, when the amount paid and to be paid are considered. Of course the prosecution will extend to those who have fraudulently received pensions. The secret service here has under surveillance more than two hundred persons in various States, whose arrests will follow closely upon that of the clerks.

Household Words.

James Pearson, 28 Sixth Street, Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have used your Spring Balm for myself and family, and think it invaluable as a household remedy, for regulating the bowels, liver and kidneys. I shall never be without it." Price 50 cents, trial bottles 10 cents.

DESTRUCTIVE RAINSTORM.

OSHKOSH, October 7.—The heaviest rainstorm of the season prevailed throughout this section last night and this morning. The rain fell in torrents, with heavy thunder and lightning. An awful amount of water fell. The country is flooded, and the low spots are covered everywhere. Cullars are flooded, and some of the railroads badly washed. There will be no trains to-day over the Lake Shore and Western road on account of a bad washout nine miles north of here. The washout on the Chicago & Northwestern, between here and Neenah, was repaired in time for trains to-night.

Tumors, cysts, mercurial diseases, scrofula, and general debility cured by "Dr. Lindsey's Blood Searcher."

FORESTS LEVIELED.

SHAWANO, October 7.—The severe storm which struck Shawano September 29, blowing down trees, fences and unroofing houses, was much more severe in the lumber regions north in Langlade county. The path of the tempest was a mile in width, and of such severity as to perfectly level the forests. For miles scarcely a tree is left standing. The path of desolation resembles in many respects that of a city after having been swept by fire.

F. H. Drake, Esq., Detroit, has recovered from a terrible skin disease, which covered his face and hands, by using Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. This is good news.

Salt Rheum for seventeen years. Helpless for eight years. Unable to walk. Got about on hands and knees. Head, face, neck, arms and legs covered. Cured by Cuticura Remedies. Will McDonald, 2542 Dearborn St., Chicago.

PERSONAL.

—Mr. and Mrs. George Woodruff have one more in the family now. The young arrival is the due cause for congratulations. Weight, 14½ pounds.

—E. J. Bennett, of the Mineral Point Tribune, is in the city, visiting his brother-in-law, Rev. G. W. Wells.

—Rev. G. S. Habbs, who while pastor of the Methodist church at Clinton, became well acquainted with many of our citizens, is to make Janesville his home. He is now the appointed pastor at Watertown, and will preach there regularly, but has taken possession of a house on South Franklin street, next to T. A. Sayles' home, and he and his family are welcome additions to Janesville society.

IRRITATION OF THE SCALP.

An Authentic Testimony.

Question: For five years I have been greatly troubled with dandruff, with a severe itching of the scalp, and my hair falling out. I have tried almost every known remedy, all proving worthless. Seeing BURNETT'S COCAINE and BURNETT'S KALISSTON advertised, I procured a bottle of each, and am happy to state that the dandruff is completely removed, and no itching remains.

J. E. CAVEN, KANSAS CITY, MO.

BURNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS are the best.

THE WEATHER.

REPORTED BY PRESTIGE & EVENSON, DRUGGISTS.

The thermometer at 6 o'clock last night stood at 74 degrees above zero; at 1 o'clock a. m. to-day at 72 degrees above; at 7 o'clock a. m. at 70 degrees above, and at 1 o'clock p. m. at 69 degrees above.

The indications to-day are, for the upper lake region, fair weather, preceded by occasional rains in the northern portions, southwesterly winds, falling followed by rising barometer, and rising followed by falling temperature.

An Entire Success.

It has been proved by the most reliable testimony that Thomas' Eucalypti Oil, is an entire success in curing the most inveterate cases of rheumatism, neuralgia, lame back, and wounds of every description.

—The cadets meet to-night.

—There was another sharp shower last night.

—The emblems of mourning continue on the postoffice.

—The Boards of Registry will meet next Tuesday at the several polling places of the city.

—The Robinson brothers sold this week to George H. Rumlill a carload of Spanish wrappers at nine cents.

—The case of Dennis Hayes is before the municipal court this afternoon. Dennis is charged with assault and battery.

—A boat containing two venturesome youth was capsized in the river this morning. A wetting was the only result.

—Work on the Congregational chapel is being pushed along lively, and the building will be ready for occupancy by the first of November.

—The funeral of the late Henry Chapin was held this morning, and was quite largely attended. Rev. G. W. Wells was the officiating clergyman.

—The cases of those who tore down the bill board of T. E. Murray's building, were called up by Judge Patten this morning, but adjourned for one week.

—Heimstet's art exhibition continues to attract attention. In order to accommodate more fully the public, the art rooms will be kept open this evening.

—Monday night at the Opera house, Charles L. Davis is to appear in the character comedy "Alvin Joslin." It is expected that a full house will greet him.

—More boxes and bales are piled up in front of Smith & Bestwick's dry goods establishment to-day, and the new goods are being unpacked and put in place.

—Andrew Burliss says that thirty years ago this month he drew wheat car to Milwaukee, and sold it there at 92½ cents a bushel. To-day he brought a load to Janesville and sold it for $1.35 per bushel. The world moves.

—Miss Dollie Blesdale, daughter of Joseph Blesdale, kindly hands us a little curiosity in the form of some "second-born" apple blossoms, picked on Mr. Bowles' farm. An apple tree which will blossom twice a season is worthy of public credit for its thrift and enterprise.

—In checking off the goods in the freight car broken into night before last it is found that while several cases of boots and shoes for A. Richardson & Bro. were broken open none were taken. The cases of hats belonging to E. T. Foote were pretty well cleaned out though, the loss being between one and two hundred dollars.

—In the case of Blanchard vs. Clyde tried in the Municipal court yesterday, the jury after being out between two and three hours returned a verdict about 7 o'clock last evening, finding in favor of Blanchard to the extent of $15, that being the amount claimed by him for selling Clyde's horse, it being five per cent. on the purchase price, $300. This will probably settle the matter.

—The attention of many of our citizens was attracted yesterday by the appearance on our streets of a pair of ponies, owned and driven by Mr. Richmond, of Elkhorn. Frank L. Smith was one of these and showed his appreciation by purchasing them. It is, indeed, the finest team of ponies seen here in many a day, and the new owner may well congratulate himself on having secured them.

—A third ward lady who has been making some picaresque, thought she knew more than the recipe book and increased the proportions of red pepper and hot spices about double, so as to be sure and have it warm. She succeeded. Warm? Well, ask her husband who tried to sample it by the teaspoonful. He won't be able to eat any solid food or pick his teeth for a month. She thought she would have to throw it all away, but finally struck the happy thought that she would bottle it up and keep it for medicinal purposes, as a lightning cure, and a blister-making application. Her husband insisted she had better use it to heat the house with instead of a furnace this winter, but a compromise has been reached, by which it will be used half and half.

—A little trouble has sprung up among a few of the cotton factory boys and girls. One of the girls named Jenny Campbell, complained because one of the boys was neglecting his work, and thus delaying her work, and the boy was for this and other reasons discharged. Night before last at the recess time, some of the boys who were provoked at her about the discharge of their comrade, expressed their displeasure and in a very rude way. She claims that they kicked her, threw stones at her, pulled her clothes and otherwise mistreated her, and she caused the arrest of John Connors, John Doolan and Fred Lutz, charging them with being the guilty ones. Their cases came up in the municipal court this morning. Doolan and Lutz were discharged and Connors was fined one dollar and cost. The little occurrences has given rise to a report that the girl was terribly abused, but she seems not to have suffered any physical injuries.

—The cadets meet to-night.

—There was another sharp shower last night.

—The emblems of mourning continue on the postoffice.

—October is giving a great variety show of weather.

—The Boards of Registry will meet next Tuesday at the several polling places of the city.

—The Robinson brothers sold this week to George H. Rumlill a carload of Spanish wrappers at nine cents.

—The case of Dennis Hayes is before the municipal court this afternoon. Dennis is charged with assault and battery.

—A boat containing two venturesome youth was capsized in the river this morning. A wetting was the only result.

—Work on the Congregational chapel is being pushed along lively, and the building will be ready for occupancy by the first of November.

—The funeral of the late Henry Chapin was held this morning, and was quite largely attended. Rev. G. W. Wells was the officiating clergyman.

—The cases of those who tore down the bill board of T. E. Murray's building, were called up by Judge Patten this morning, but adjourned for one week.

—Heimstet's art exhibition continues to attract attention. In order to accommodate more fully the public, the art rooms will be kept open this evening.

—Monday night at the Opera house, Charles L. Davis is to appear in the character comedy "Alvin Joslin." It is expected that a full house will greet him.

—More boxes and bales are piled up in front of Smith & Bestwick's dry goods establishment to-day, and the new goods are being unpacked and put in place.

—Andrew Burliss says that thirty years ago this month he drew wheat car to Milwaukee, and sold it there at 92½ cents a bushel. To-day he brought a load to Janesville and sold it for $1.35 per bushel. The world moves.

—Miss Dollie Blesdale, daughter of Joseph Blesdale, kindly hands us a little curiosity in the form of some "second-born" apple blossoms, picked on Mr. Bowles' farm. An apple tree which will blossom twice a season is worthy of public credit for its thrift and enterprise.

—In checking off the goods in the freight car broken into night before last it is found that while several cases of boots and shoes for A. Richardson & Bro. were broken open none were taken. The cases of hats belonging to E. T. Foote were pretty well cleaned out though, the loss being between one and two hundred dollars.

—In the case of Blanchard vs. Clyde tried in the Municipal court yesterday, the jury after being out between two and three hours returned a verdict about 7 o'clock last evening, finding in favor of Blanchard to the extent of $15, that being the amount claimed by him for selling Clyde's horse, it being five per cent. on the purchase price, $300. This will probably settle the matter.

—The attention of many of our citizens was attracted yesterday by the appearance on our streets of a pair of ponies, owned and driven by Mr. Richmond, of Elkhorn. Frank L. Smith was one of these and showed his appreciation by purchasing them. It is, indeed, the finest team of ponies seen here in many a day, and the new owner may well congratulate himself on having secured them.

—A third ward lady who has been making some picaresque, thought she knew more than the recipe book and increased the proportions of red pepper and hot spices about double, so as to be sure and have it warm. She succeeded. Warm? Well, ask her husband who tried to sample it by the teaspoonful. He won't be able to eat any solid food or pick his teeth for a month. She thought she would have to throw it all away, but finally struck the happy thought that she would bottle it up and keep it for medicinal purposes, as a lightning cure, and a blister-making application. Her husband insisted she had better use it to heat the house with instead of a furnace this winter, but a compromise has been reached, by which it will be used half and half.

—A little trouble has sprung up among a few of the cotton factory boys and girls. One of the girls named Jenny Campbell, complained because one of the boys was neglecting his work, and thus delaying her work, and the boy was for this and other reasons discharged. Night before last at the recess time, some of the boys who were provoked at her about the discharge of their comrade, expressed their displeasure and in a very rude way. She claims that they kicked her, threw stones at her, pulled her clothes and otherwise mistreated her, and she caused the arrest of John Connors, John Doolan and Fred Lutz, charging them with being the guilty ones. Their cases came up in the municipal court this morning. Doolan and Lutz were discharged and Connors was fined one dollar and cost. The little occurrences has given rise to a report that the girl was terribly abused, but she seems not to have suffered any physical injuries.

Stories of a Tame Crow.

Of all our pets among the land birds, I select for special notice the hooded crow. He is not a beautiful bird certainly; but he makes up for his not handsome appearance, by his exceeding cleverness. We had one in particular for many years. We called him Crabble, because of his seldom mode of progression—when not on wing. His liberty was seldom restricted, unless he had been guilty of some prank more than usually audacious, and then his punishment would be a day or two's confinement, which he greatly hated; but he soon managed to escape into giving him his freedom, and manifested utmost gratitude to his liberator. His moral sense was at least as obtuse as a cat's. He delighted in stealing, simply as it seemed for his own sake, not because he could make any use of his plunder. Spoons, needles, wires, pins of thread, bits of wood, little ones of shoes and socks, anything and everything that was portable to which he could get access, he would carry off, and carefully hide, covering them over with bits of turf; and then, wiping his bill, in the most satisfied manner, hop away as though he had performed a highly meritorious action. As for the half-knitted stockings which might be left on a chair or table, if Crabble was about, the whole would quickly be pulled out and removed, and the stockings torn to tatters. I caught him one day—and an intensely droll figure he cut—hopping out of doors with a slip on his bill. On another occasion he made off with a piece of tobacco. We never could make out whether he had any intention of himself trying the soothing effects of the weed. He had, or affected to have, a great dislike to bare feet; as the little boys who came to the house with baskets of sillocks or with messes of sugar, had but too good reason to know. On the whole, he was on terms of very good friendship with the dogs and cats; but it always afforded him exquisite delight to tease them, particularly to pinch the point of an outstretched tail, if the owner thereof happened to be asleep; and a pinch of his sharp and powerful bill, whatever pleasure it might afford him to inflict, was no joke to his victim. Once an old woman was bringing a message to the house. Just as she was crossing a stile, Crabble's quick eye fell on the spotless cap which adorned the old lady's head. It was an opportunity too tempting to be resisted. Down he swooped, neatly plucked off her head dress, and with a triumphant "Cra, Cra," flew away with it. "Not being aware there was any such 'uncanny brute' about the house, her consternation may be imagined; and when she appeared at the back door, and told of her white muslin match, and told in tones of great indignation, how she had been despoiled of her cap, the old lady met with much sympathy from the domestics, who hated Crabble with a most perfect hatred. And little wonder they hated him, for he teased and tormented them unmercifully, and by his never-ending tricks often imposed upon them a great amount of additional work. For instance, clothes on the bleaching green seemed to regard as spread out for the special purpose of affording him an opportunity of showing how completely he could spoil them. As any rag, what he did, whenever he had the chance, was to march and hop all over them in the most systematic manner, with the dirtiest effect.

What I am about to relate will appear to many incredible, but having frequently witnessed it I can vouch for the accuracy in every particular. Our old cook was an expert dresser of the fine Shetland shawls so well known and so much prized. It is quite an accomplishment to be able to dress those delicate fabrics, and none but a Shetlander can do it properly. The shawl, having been washed and slightly starched, is stretched over the bleaching green, a few inches from the ground, with a multitude of wooden pegs like pencils, and allowed to dry in the sun. Crabble would sit on some wall at a little distance, intently watching the proceedings of the old cook, who particularly detested him, and with whom he had a standing feud. Then he would fly off, and presently return with the shawl and wettest clod he could find, and set purpose to put upon the outstretched shawl, thereby bringing the righteous indignation of poor Crabby, who gave expression to her wrathful and outraged feelings in language much more forcible than choice; all which did not in the least affect Crabble or disturb his equanimity. In these ways, however, he got to be such a nuisance that it became necessary on bleaching days, or when a shawl was being dressed, to make sure he was not at large, else the bleaching or dressing was certain to prove a labor lost. But then he soon got so exceedingly cunning and so adroit in avoiding capture that it was often impossible to secure and confine him. At last, as we could fall upon no plan of curing him of his thievish and mischievous propensities, we were obliged, most reluctantly, to part with our poor Crabble, who was sent to a friend in the south. —Chambers' Journal.

Propagating Roses.

The month of August is probably the best time to propagate roses by slips. There are various modes by which it is done. Nurserymen, we think, prefer setting the slips in layers, or shallow dishes, with sharp sand and water, so as to be about the consistence of mud, and remove the water daily. The youngest of this year's wood is the best, and with due care any number can be raised in this way. But there are other and somewhat simpler ways for private families to obtain all they need. The young wood can be set in a cold frame, or in any rich, loose soil and watered daily. In about a month the plant can be taken up carefully and each one set in a small pot, and as soon as would be other slips, always remembering that frequent moderate watering is indispensable.

The young wood should be cut off a little below a joint or eye, leaving one or two eyes on the part out of the ground, and stripping off all the leaves. The younger the wood is the better. Some have been better rewarded by setting out in loose soil than by the saucer and sand process, but we do not wish to say that it is to be preferred. —Gleanings of Europe.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

—Pampered animals require more attention than others.

—Mint Sauce.—Mix one tablespoonful of white sugar to half a teaspoon of good vinegar; add the mint and let it infuse for half an hour before sending to the table. Serve with roast lamb or mutton.

—A New York farmer, who is also a practical sheep grower, gives the following as a sure cure for grub in sheep: Take an ounce of niter of the animal affected half a teaspoonful of kerosene oil.

—Dry sulphur is given as a remedy for lice on cattle by one who says he knows it is effective. It should be sprinkled all over the body and worked into the hair.

—The remnants of any pudding left from one dinner may be served for the next by arranging it into a compot, mass and covering it with a meringue of whipped whites of eggs and a little powdered sugar. Set into a hot oven just long enough to brown.

—To prevent choking, break an egg into a cup and give it to the person choking, to swallow. The white of the egg seems to catch around the obstacle and remove it. If one egg does not answer the purpose, try another. The white is all that is necessary.

—To ascertain if water is hard or soft procure a small quantity of soap dissolved in alcohol, and let a few drops of it fall into a glass of water to be tried; if the water becomes milky it is hard, but if little or no milkiness results the water may be said to be soft.

—To make jelly-cake fritters cut some stale sponge or other cake into round with a cake cutter. Fry these in deep brown in hot lard; dip each quickly into a bowl of boiling milk and lay upon a hot plate, spread thickly with jam or preserves. Serve hot, with cream to pour over them.

—Quail Pie.—Quail, butter, pepper and salt. Cut the quail in pieces and stew them about ten minutes, or till tender. Line your baking-dish with a nice paste; put in the birds; a little of the water in which they were stewed, thickened with a little flour; shake in pepper and salt and bits of butter; cover with a nice crust and bake a delicate brown.

—Tomato Jelly.—Tear in pieces some ripe tomatoes and stem them until thoroughly cooked, with only sufficient water to keep them from burning; put the pulp into a jelly-bag, and when the juice has trickled through, put a pound of sugar to each pint of juice and boil rapidly until it jellies. If the color is not bright red, a few drops of cochineal will improve it. This jelly may be eaten with roast meat.

—A timely suggestion, on its travels without credit, is to the effect that before removing a threshing machine to another farm it should be run empty from five to ten minutes at a high rate of speed in order to get rid of the seeds of wheat, clover, etc., and to disperse particles of smut that may have adhered to it. In this way the germs of weeds or fungi will be left where raised and not introduced by this medium as a pest to other fields.

—The reason why rain causes spots on the varnish of a carriage is that a certain quantity of moisture is absorbed by the varnish, and this causes the texture of the varnish to change. A sort of granulation is effected by which the reflection of the light is altered, and this causes the color to change. If water is applied to the varnish of a carriage and is permitted to dry on, it will always have this effect, and so will mud. A carriage that has been out in the rain or mud should be washed and wiped dry and polished with a fine, soft leather. The quality of the varnish also has something to do with it.

Experiments in Crossing Wheat.

The peculiar manner of flowering displayed by the common wheat-plants makes it appear quite unlikely that varieties of wheat can be expected to vary in instances, the result of crossing. The pistils and stamens are inclosed in a casing or leafy sheath, and there is no movement of pollen from one plant to another, as seen in the squash, in corn, and many other plants. The varieties of wheat, it is thought, originated chiefly from the influence of their surroundings. The soil, the aspect, and atmosphere in time change the character of the plant and impress on it new characters, and these become fixed by continual repetition. Efforts have from time to time been made to produce new varieties of wheat by crossing, but with comparatively limited results. The most recent experiments in this direction were made in the Agricultural Experiment station connected with the Rural New Yorker in July of this year, and from an examination of the plants that had been treated, made after the seeds had been secured. The operation was long and very delicate, and consisted in gently bending back the leafy casing surrounding the largest and best buds in a head of wheat before they flowered, carefully cutting out the unripe stamens, and putting in their place stamens from the buds of another variety. The pistils, it may be remarked, were then ripe and in a condition to receive the pollen. The heads were then allowed to spring back into place, enclosing the new stamens with the pistils, and a worsted thread was carefully wound around the bud to prevent it from opening. The work of fertilizing the best buds in a head of wheat required more than two hours, as the operation was a most delicate and tedious one. The head of wheat was then set to a stake, to protect it from the wind and birds. The result, so far, proved most successful, for a number of the flowers perfected their fruit, and enough ripe seeds were obtained to make a fair trial in planting. The fact that each stamen when operated on was in an immature state, and was entirely removed, shows that a true cross was obtained. Whether the new plants that may spring from the seed will exhibit the characteristics of both parents remains to be seen, but good seeds were obtained by the operation, and this is regarded as a valuable addition to our knowledge of the wheat-plant. —Scribner's Magazine.

THE BIG HORSE.
One of the leading attractions in the Burr Robbins & Colvin show is the big horse. It is a big one, so big, in fact, that one almost doubts his own eyes when he looks on it. This mammoth equine weighs 2350 pounds, and stands 21 hands high. There never was such a horse shown to the public before, for while the size is unparalleled, it is not a mere uncouth bulk of horseflesh, but a well built, well shaped, finely proportioned animal. Everywhere the show has been this season the horse has attracted the attention of all, and crowds upon crowds have admired and wondered. It is well worth the price of admission to see this wonderful horse, if there was nothing else under the tent, but after all it is only one of many attractions and wonders, which have been gathered from all parts of the world to amuse, interest, and instruct the thousands of people who have crowded into the tents this season. Many in and about Janesville are looking forward to the 19th, when the show will be here, and expect much pleasure and profit in seeing it. They will not be disappointed.

ROBBINS' SHOW.

The following are some of the many hundred press notices which the Robbins & Colvin Great Allied Shows have received in different parts of the United States:

From the Kokomo Gazette, May 28, 1881.

The Burr Robbins and Colvin show has its mammoth tent pitched here to-day. Early this morning our streets were filled with immense crowds of people, and by the time the parade took place everything was a jam. The street parade was a brilliant pageant and fully up to the standard of the best.

In the menagerie is the best and rarest collection of animals we have ever seen. Among the special features of this department is the cow faced antelope, of which no account is given in natural history. This animal was discovered by Stanley, the great African explorer. The blood-sweating Behemoth of Holy Writ, and countless others too numerous to mention, make up this interesting department of the show.

From the St. Paul Evening News, June 9th, 1881.

The Burr Robbins and Colvin show is a most remarkable and German-American and unusually attractive show. It arrived on time this morning and the street parade took place as advertised. The parade was good, and an enormous crowd turned out to see it, notwithstanding the fact that the weather was rather chilly. The company has some fine specimens of animals, and some equally fine specimens of animals not wild.

The performance in the afternoon showed that the praise given to this company by the papers in other cities was well deserved. The animals promised have been brought here, and the ring performance is superior to that of any circus which has visited this section of the State recently. The wonderful riding of Charles W. Fish made the old circus goers about with enthusiasm, and made those unfamiliar with circus performances turn pale with fright, while the others were not at all behind the times; and altogether the show gave perfect satisfaction.

From the Grand Rapids Daily Democrat, Friday, June 24th.

Not even the strong counter attraction of the races yesterday afternoon sufficed to materially diminish the large audience which Grand Rapids always furnishes a first-class circus, such as the Burr Robbins and Colvin. At night, too, the large tent was crowded from the topmost seat to the ring. We are a circus-loving people, and it is many years since we have enjoyed an entertainment of this kind possessing more genuine merit than that of last night. In the menagerie the large horse, the heavy weight lifter, and other advertised specialties attracted general attention. Many new features were introduced in the circus performance. The entire programme, from the daring bareback riding of Charles Fish to the funny remarks of the clowns, was really first-class in quality, and deserving of great commendation.

Russell sisters have opened a fine millinery stock in the Williams block, opposite the Corn Exchange. All the latest styles are there displayed, and those desiring crapes redressed should bear the place in mind.
